Nineteen Forty One

by

Stanley Straub

On this day in nineteen forty one, a beautiful baby girl was born
She came to be known as Donna Jean Huber on that fateful morn

Her name changed from Huber to Gabrielli to Straub through time
However, she is still the same beautiful girl and now she's all mine

I'm planning on keeping her around to watch her grow old with me Forever, to me, she'll always be the most beautiful girl that'll ever be

They don't make girls like they use to and Donna was made perfect
She's like a flower that was carefully chosen and freshly handpicked

Today, Donna Straub has gotten to the lovely age of seventy five She's still beautiful, intelligent, charming; and is very much alive

I want to say on this beautiful day that happens to be her birthday
Honey, I hope you have many, many more to add to your resume
